

The Head of the Center for Interreligious and Intercultural Dialogue Meets with the Religious Leader of the Iranian Jews

In his meeting with Rabbi Younes Hamami Lalehzar, the religious leader of the Iranian Jewish community, and his accompanying delegation, Dr. Ziaee, the Head of the Center for Interreligious and Intercultural Dialogue of the Islamic Culture and Relations Organization emphasized the important role of the leaders of different religions in promoting spirituality, morality, and strengthening dialogue between Islam and Judaism.

Dr. Ziaee further added that: “We hope that by resuming interreligious dialogues between Islam and Judaism, there will be increased convergence and synergy between the followers of these two divine religions.”

Rabbi Hammami Lalehzar, too, stressed the need for promoting peaceful coexistence among the followers of different religions and preserving human dignity and added: “There are many narrations in the Jewish sacred texts that can pave the path for strengthening peaceful coexistence between the followers of monotheistic religions as well as all human beings.”

In this meeting, Dr. Homayoun Sameyah Najafabadi, the representative of the Iranian Jewish community in the Islamic Parliament of Iran and the Chairman of the Jewish Association of Tehran, too, emphasized the need for expanding morality and religiosity in society and added: “Increased communication between Muslim and Jewish thinkers, which itself stems from a sense of mutual respect and the principle of having correct knowledge of the divine religions, will lead to greater cohesion among them.”
